

HENRY W. COMFORT, WELL-KNOWN BUCKS COUNTIAN, DIES

Deceased Had Been in Hospital For the Past Week;
Was 67 Years of Age

WAS AN EXECUTIVE

Connected With Many Institutions; Director of Bristol Trust Company

FALLSINGTON, Mar. 19.—One of Bucks County's well known and much admired residents, Henry W. Comfort, died at the Mercer Hospital, Trenton, N. J., last night at 6:15 o'clock.

Death occurred following a brief illness, the late Mr. Comfort having been confined in the hospital for the past eight days.

The deceased was born in the Comfort homestead in Falls Township, on February 27, 1863, where three generations of the family in direct line lived. The old farm is about one and one half miles from the village of Fallsington.

The late Mr. Comfort was connected with many of the leading institutions of lower Bucks County, namely in the following capacities: President and treasurer of the International Pottery Company, of Trenton; director of the First Mechanics National Bank of Trenton; president of the Yardley National Bank, Yardley; vice-president of the William H. Moon Nursery Company; president of the Morrisville Building and Loan Association; director of the Bristol Trust Company; president of the Bucks County Contribution Insurance Company. He had also been a director of the Fallsington Library Company and manager of the Friends' Asylum for the Insane at Frankford.

During his early life Mr. Comfort received his education at Friends Schools in this section. He was a member of the Society of Friends. The only survivor is his wife, Elizabeth VanAken Comfort. Mr. Comfort was thrice married, his first wife being Edith DeCon, of Trenton; and his second Lydia A. Parsons, of Falls Township, who died in 1914. The late Mr. Comfort and the former Miss VanAken were married in 1924.

During his earlier years the well-known Bucks Countian became manager of the homestead land, and later gained a high reputation as an executive of large institutions and corporations. Much of his time was given liberally to beneficent and public purposes.

On the 320 acres of the large Comfort farm there was kept a large herd of dairy cows. A large portion of the milk supply of Trenton, N. J., was derived from the Comfort place, this having continued since 1847 when the grandfather of the deceased established a milk route there. This source of supply was later merged into the Castanea Dairy Company of Trenton, of which the late Henry W. Comfort was president.

George M. and Ann Elizabeth (Comfort) Comfort were the parents of the deceased Bucks County executive.

Freedom Party Given In Honor of Miss Milnor

Miss Sara Milnor, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Milnor, of Bath Road, was tendered a surprise freedom party on Saturday evening in Profy's Hall over McCrory's store, by a number of her friends.

The room was tastefully decorated in blue and gold, the class colors of Miss Milnor, while at Bristol High School. The spacious ceiling was laced with blue and gold colored crepe paper. The window drapes were made of the same material and the lights also shone forth blue and gold, reflecting their gay coverings.

The birthday cake was huge and a work of art. It was trimmed with rosebuds and covered with icing, the top of which was in the form of a jeweled box, which when opened disclosed a wealth of chocolate buds, which were thoroughly enjoyed by the guests.

Dancing to the strains of the radio, was the pleasure of the evening indulged in by the merry-makers. Refreshments were also served.

The guests included: Miss Milnor, Miss Florence MacLhaney, Miss Florence Peirce, Miss Winnifred Tracy, Miss Marion Arensmeyer, Miss Mildred Shade, Miss Agnes Larriessey and Mrs. Charles Milnor, of Bristol; Miss Hazel Quillan, Miss Zoe Gould, Miss Jenny Minkema, Miss Mary Rooney and Miss Margaret Taylor, of Edgely; Miss Helen Roberts, of Morrisville; John Black, Robert Brooks, Harry Hanford, William Hardy, Edgar Opdyke, Dayton Fegley, James Wright, Edward Conley, Whyllie Bell, John Smoyer, Jr., Leslie Strumfels, Percy Earl, and Wilson Black, of Bristol; Albert Baldwin and Harry Kendall, of Passaic, N. UNEARTHING OF SKULL RECALLS TREASURE TALES

Tragedy of Blackbeard's Buried Wealth Recounted With Find at Burlington

ON ABDILL PROPERTY

BURLINGTON, N. J., Mar. 19.—While digging in the north side of his yard in Hunter's alley on Thursday last, Ralph Abdill unearthed a human skull, and once more the tragedy of Blackbeard's buried treasure is being recalled. As a matter of fact some think the exhumed skull may be that of the pirate that Blackbeard killed with a silver bullet and buried with the treasure in order to guard it.

Mr. Abdill's yard is a part of the famous old tan yard where tradition says that Blackbeard buried his treasure while the witches danced and screeched around the giant sycamore tree on the Grubb lawn. The treasure is said to have been buried beneath a black walnut tree which long since disappeared. Some of the older residents remember having played beneath the tree in their childhood days, little thinking at the time of the wealth that lay beneath the sod.

Recently the shoe factory once owned and operated by Samuel Hunter, who then lived on High street, north of Union street, was torn down, and in order to get rid of the debris, Mr. Abdill began to dig a large hole in his back yard and bury it. At a depth of about three feet Mr. Abdill discovered bones, but not thinking that they had any particular import, he cast them aside.

Soon, however, he unearthed a human skull, and knowing that he was within the Blackbeard zone, his mind ran to the famous pirate who, tradition says, buried his gold in Burlington.

And Mr. Abdill had reason to connect the skull he unearthed with the tradition of Blackbeard. When Blackbeard was about to bury his treasure in the tan yard he asked for a volunteer to guard it. A pirate stepped forth from the group of men who were performing the treasure burial rite beneath the pale light of the stars. Knowing that only the dead of his kind were to be trusted with a hoard of gold, the pirate chief put a silver bullet in his pistol and shot the volunteer. The volunteer then was buried with the treasure. The man's dog was buried with him.

The skull dug up by Mr. Abdill on Thursday has a hole on the left side, above the ear. What made the hole? Was it plowed there by the silver bullet of the heartless pirate? Is it proof of the tale that treasure was buried in the old tanyard long before the Revolutionary War? Does it substantiate the belief on the part of many that Blackbeard's treasure is not merely a myth?

The skull is that of a man, a large man, and suggests the type of individual that might have roved the seas and killed, captured and robbed.

The news that Mr. Abdill had dug up a human skull at or near where Blackbeard is said to have buried his treasure soon spread and many gathered in Hunter's alley to see the relic of a long-gone day—the skull of a man who lived when Burlington was young and knew the mysteries of the past. Opinions were given as to whether it might have belonged to an Indian; whether some crime lay back of the burial; whether the owner had been peacefully laid to rest or tragically interred. But most preferred to believe that it had some association with the Blackbeard tradition.

Mr. Abdill still has the skull. He has not yet decided what disposition to make of it. It is in the backyard covered by a pan where it may be seen by those who wish to see.

Several attempts have been made to recover Blackbeard's treasure, one about twenty-five years ago, but the searchers were frightened away by the barking of a dog. Was it the spirit of the guardian dog buried with the treasure? The superstitious say yes.

INDIAN MAIDEN ON TRIAL FOR MURDER

Lila Jimerson Charged With Killing Wife of Noted Artist

SAY THAT SHE IS SANE

By James L. Kilgallen
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
BUFFALO, N. Y., Mar. 19.—A trial flecked with melodrama, mystery and romance was scheduled to open here as Lila Jimerson, Indian maiden, faced murder charges in connection with the killing of Mrs. Henry Marchand, wife of a noted artist and sculptor.

Lila is 35 years old and says she never had a love affair in her life until she met Marchand, who is held as a material witness in the case.

Mrs. Marchand was found beaten and choked to death in her home here, Nancy Bowen, aged Indian woman, arrested the day after the body was found, told authorities Lila had told her to kill Mrs. Marchand because she "was a witch." Mrs. Bowen confessed, authorities claimed, that she received ouija board messages and "witchcraft" warnings to kill the artist's wife.

The prosecution will charge that Lila induced Mrs. Bowen to do away with Mrs. Marchand, with whom the younger woman was infatuated. She had met the artist posing as a model.

Dr. James W. Putnam, alienist who examined the defendant, declared she was sane but qualified his finding by stating she "suffers from a belief in witchcraft."

District Attorney Moore said today one of the chief witnesses for the prosecution will be an Indian named (Continued on Page 6)

DANCING IS ENJOYED

The annual St. Patrick's banquet given by the Ancient Order of Hibernians was held Monday evening in their hall on Corson street. The banquet has always been a big success, but this year seemed to surpass previous celebrations, and it was considered the best ever held.

The banquet was held on the second floor and the room was beautifully decorated with orange and green crepe paper streamers, which gracefully hung from the corners to the center of the room. Orange and green draperies looked attractive on the rear and front walls, while large shamrocks decorated the side walls. All the lights were covered with orange shades and on the tables were numerous green candles, which gave the room a soft golden glow.

A delicious menu was prepared as follows: Fresh fruit cup, celery, olives, chicken a la king, Vienna rolls, butter, broiled fresh mackerel, butter sauce, parsley potatoes, sherbet, roast young turkey, filling, cranberry sauce, glazed sweet potatoes, peas, Neapolitan ice cream, fancy cakes, coffee, salted nuts and cream mints.

MANHATTAN SOAP CO. RUSHED WITH ORDERS

New Product Being Introduced Meets With Great Popularity

IS WIDELY ADVERTISED

The general improvement in business conditions, which have been noticeable for the past month, are manifesting themselves in increased activity at the Bristol plant of the Manhattan Soap Company.

The Manhattan Soap Company, established some 45 years ago, and which up until but a few years ago was located in New York City, is now rushed with orders for its product at its large and efficiently operated plant here. This company for many years has been a leader in the soap industry, and its principal product, "Sweetheart" soap, has a nation-wide sale.

Now a new product is being placed on the market by the Manhattan Company. It is known as "Blue Streak Steel Wool" and "Blue Streak Soap." The product is one of the creations of the Manhattan Company, and despite the fact that it is but a short time since it was introduced, it is meeting with a very extensive demand.

A nation-wide concerted effort involving a tremendous advertising campaign has been scheduled by the Manhattan Company for release May 18th. The week beginning May 18th, will be devoted to exploiting "Blue Streak." Large advertising copy will be run in the metropolitan papers and practically every chain store organization is going to cooperate.

Knowledge of the plan to create a nation-wide demand for "Blue Streak," has already had its effect, and the local firm is swamped with orders, not only for "Blue Streak" but for "Sweetheart" soap as well. Additional employees are being added to the staff, and the plant is working to capacity. There are prospects of a night shift being necessary. All indications point to "Blue Streak" meeting with great popularity.

Monday, March 10th, was the biggest day in the way of shipments in the history of the Manhattan Company. On this day nearly 1,000 cases of the company's products were shipped from the local plant to all sections of the country. "We believe that the increased demand for our products will be permanent," said Alfred Garfigner, manager, today. "We have placed upon the market an article which is going to revolutionize the soap industry."

TAKE TESTIMONY TO PADLOCK THREE HOTELS IN COUNTY

Various Shaped Bottles Fill Prosecution's Table As Case is Heard

AN ARRAY OF LAWYERS

Red Lion Inn and Wheat Sheaf Hotel Cases Now Being Heard

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 19.—Surrounded by a "company front" of various shaped bottles containing evidence of high-powered whiskey, gin, beer and wine that covered a large portion of the prosecution's table, the first day of the proceedings to have three Bucks county hotels padlocked was completed yesterday.

Testimony was heard against two hotels, the famous Red Lion Inn on the Bristol pike just over the Philadelphia city line, and the Wheat Sheaf Inn, Falls township. Evidence against the third place, the Closson House, Bristol, will be presented next week.

Prohibition agents, big and small; State Police from various sections of the State composed the witnesses on one side while proprietors, former owners and character witnesses for the various houses made up the personnel of the defense.

The prosecution was in charge of two attorneys, one the District Attorney and the other a Deputy District Attorney General of the State. The defendants were represented by Howard I. James, of Bristol, and John L. DuBois, of Doylestown.

After testimony had been offered to show that the Wheat Sheaf Inn had been raided and liquor seized, W. Willis Lippincott, owner of the place, said that he rented the place to Carlo Carleo for $125 a month. He said that he had no knowledge that Carleo sold liquor until the place was raided. After the police made the raid, Lippincott said he gave Carleo orders to "get out." Carleo, he said, "came from the Closson House, Bristol."

John W. Backes, of Wheat Sheaf, a farmer; Aaron S. Kemble, 80, who tends the gasoline station in front of the Wheat Sheaf Hotel; William P. Fabian, who sold pork and poultry to the hotel; and Mrs. Josephine P. Kemble, wife of the man who sells gasoline, all testified that the Wheat Sheaf Hotel in their opinion, was operated properly.

"They always treated me alright," Kemble testified. "My business was on the outside and their's was on the inside. I didn't nose in their business because I didn't want to be mixed up with anything if there was anything wrong inside. I never saw anything wrong."

James J. Lucas, Federal Prohibition Agent, testified that he visited the Red Lion Inn on six occasions and purchased either whiskey, beer or wine. His testimony was corroborated in part by Major William J. M. Turner, acting deputy administrator of the Federal Prohibition office and another agent.

Frederick W. Yeagle, the owner of the Red Lion Inn at the time the place was raided by Federal agents, was called by the Commonwealth for cross-examination when the defense offered no testimony. He claims he has no interest in the Red Lion Inn since March 5, 1929. He had been there for four years before that. He said that the property had been in his wife's name and that his wife recently sold it to his nephew, Elmer Sedinsky.

Attorneys will submit findings of fact to Judge Hiram H. Keller, who presided at the hearings, after which the cases will be listed for argument at a regular term of argument court. It is then left up to the Court to decide whether the hotels in question will be padlocked or continue to operate.

DREAMS OF WEALTH

America is still the "land of promise" to millions of Europeans in lowly circumstances, who vision it as a country of easy wealth and economic equality. The "American myth" is real to them.

The best proof of this is the long list of prospective immigrants kept waiting in their native lands by our immigration laws. The number seeking admittance to the United States is larger than the number admitted under the yearly quotas.

There is still another way in which this faith in the fabulous opportunities offered the immigrant on these shores demonstrates itself. This is the eagerness with which Europeans accept reports of vast unclaimed fortunes left by dying immigrants in the United States.

Unscrupulous schemers and fraudulent syndicates are making use of this state of mind to mislead hundreds of thousands of Europeans of their money, in many instances of their life's savings. It is only necessary to invent a story that a rich immigrant of such-and-such a name has died in America without American kin and all bearing that name or one similar thereto dig into the money bags for the "litigation fund." These fortune hunters never bring riches to anyone for the reason that the two or three unclaimed immigrant fortunes were left by persons completely out of touch with their families and living under assumed names, legally or otherwise adopted.

But the thing works both ways. Many American families have castles on the Rhine, empires abroad or inherited interests in the heart of New York or one of the other great cities. And confidence men constantly prey upon the claimants to these fanciful fortunes.

A WELL KNOWN ART

"The art of love-making," says a Baltimore preacher, "should be taught young men and women." If so, then grandmothers should be taught to lap ashes—which is proverbially impossible, because the grandmothers of the proverb already know all that is to be known about it.

If there is one thing in which the youngsters do not lack knowledge, it is the art of love-making. There is a royal road to that knowledge which young hearts have in trouble in finding and traveling. The first man and woman were created with proficiency in the art, and since creation men and women have been born with it.

"GENERAL CRACK"

BY GEORGE PREEDY

Copyright 1925 by Dodd Mead & Co., Inc.
The Warner Bros. & Vitaphone production starring John Barrymore, is based on this novel.

SYNOPSIS

General Crack, as head of the imperial army of King Leopold, has succeeded in conquering the enemy, and lays his plans for the coronation of Leopold as Emperor. He is anxious to return to Ottenheim to claim Princess Eleonora, his wife. Leopold, for state reasons, had to give up Eleonora, as Crack's price for fighting on his side. He is disgusted at the plan that goes a crack from the populace. His sister, the Archduchess, especially, is disgusted by Crack. And Crack refused her hand, when Leopold first offered it to the soldier of fortune.

No voice was raised for the Emperor; nor did the two women in the coach appear to notice this omission. They seemed to have made themselves one with the triumph of Christian, and to be elated at his election. And that Christian was cool before all this giddy adulation only added to the deep vexation of Leopold, who thought:

"The higher the peak, the deeper the abyss—to make him fall as no man has fallen since Belshazzar!"

XIII

There was a reception after the Opera, in the house of the Governor of the Spanish Netherlands, now, after so long, returned in triumph to his residence.

Leopold had to move about among his important guests, making himself agreeable, gaining himself, as he thought.

But Leopold insisted.

"Send him to my chamber to-night, when I am alone at last I suppose I shall be alone, somewhere towards the dawn. I must and will see that man, Hensdorff, and if you do not send him to me I will find him for myself, no matter at what cost and scandal."

Walking daintily across the red carpet, Gabor stopped before Leopold, who had not looked up at his approach, but sat there, sullen, with downcast head, before that wide range window which opened on the winter darkness.

"Have you heard any more from Ottenheim?" Leopold asked, in a low voice.

"Only," said Gabor, delicately, "only, Sir, that the girl mopes and pines."

Leopold put his cold hand to his chilled forehead.

"How do you know she mopes and pines?" he whispered.

"I have my agents in Ottenheim as in other places, Sir," replied the Transylvanian, "I was many years in Prince Christian's service, and still am in communication with those who serve him now."

This was true enough, and Gabor had much information as to the petty details of that lonely household in the Chateau on the Danube.

"The winter comes on," he continued, in a low voice; "all those brilliant birds that Christian paid so much for are dead, or dying; and the antelopes and gazelles also shiver and die. There are no longer any flowers on the ground, any leaves on the trees; and the waters, instead of being blue or green, are now grey. There are clouds, both over the sun by day and over the moon by night; and the stars seldom show. These big rooms seem very empty to the Princess Eleonora; she is far from every one she knew, save that old woman—who is, after all, Christian's watchdog, Christian's spy."

"Is she?" said Leopold, hotly. He had not thought of this. "Has he won over that old harridan, then?"

"He has," said Gabor. "She sends him her reports, like a guardian reporting on a prisoner. Eleonora does this, or does that; Eleonora thinks of this, or thinks of that; it is all taken down and sent to her lord and master, who, in his turn, is never so occupied. Sir, in your affairs, that he cannot send back his minute instructions as to his wife—or captive, as you may choose to take her."

"Ay," said Leopold, moodily, "I might have thought of that—he'd have her watched, he would not leave her unguarded. . . ."

"And there is the garrison, too, and Colonel Pous; when she rides abroad, Colonel Pous must be her escort; when she stirs, the garrison must note her going. Do you think that she can long endure this, and not droop, Sir?"

Leopold did not speak.

"And not think," added Gabor, deliberately, "of the man who might rescue her?"

"O God!" cried Leopold, passionately. "What shall I do?"

From the pocket of his decent black suit, Gabor pulled out a fine handkerchief, and stretched it, dragging it exactly corner to corner.

As he did this, he remarked, in an abstracted manner:

"Prince Christian is taking great pains, Sir, that the campaign shall soon be over; and when it is over, he will go back to Ottenheim, and it will be too late."

To such a man as Leopold, the words "too late" are the bitterest in the world, for he knows full well how often they must be said about him and his actions.

"Is it true," he asked, huskily, "that she is not well? That she sickens there in her loneliness?"

It seemed to Leopold as if this man might have either of those women, both of whom were dead, and something sacred to himself, by the mere putting out of his hand, "So easy! So easy!" he said, furiously, in his heart, "Even Luise fails so easily, to the first flashy adventurer. What is he but a mercenary soldier who well knows his trade, who may be bought at any moment if the price be high enough? And he reflected, sickening, the price that he had paid, and the price that he had offered: two women, one woman waiting for the victor in Ottenheim, the other woman sitting there looking as if she were ready to fall at his feet. Could not she also recall how she had been put forward and rejected?

Count Hensdorff still remained by the Emperor's side, watching the sparkling scene which was to him a certain seal upon his strenuous endeavours, a certain inflexion of success—definitely as the collar of the Golden Fleece was the insignia of Christian's success.

"Send me," said Leopold, abruptly, "that scoundrel Gabor. I have some work for him."

"Gabor is in the palace now," think, Sir," he replied, doubtfully; "but to what end would you see him? Whatever your purpose, you might find a more proper instrument."

But Leopold insisted.

"Send him to my chamber to-night, when I am alone at last I suppose I shall be alone, somewhere towards the dawn. I must and will see that man, Hensdorff, and if you do not send him to me I will find him for myself, no matter at what cost and scandal."

Turning the light of Truth on false and misleading statements in recent cigarette advertising

WHAT ANOTHER MANUFACTURER of cigarettes chooses to say about his product is not our affair. Even when he sees fit to misrepresent his product and leave false impressions concerning it, that still is his business—not ours.

But—when, in his advertising, he goes beyond his own product and makes false statements or leaves misleading impressions about other cigarettes—then it is time that the truth be told.

Some time ago a manufacturer of cigarettes used the following statements in his advertising:

"The extra secret heating process removes from (——) harmful irritants, corrosive acids, which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way, and which cause throat irritation and coughing."

"No matter how much or how little you pay for cigarettes you have a choice of only two general classes, and not more than two. In one class you have the billions of cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way and in the other class you have (——), the toasted cigarette, a product of modern science, a cigarette from which harmful irritants have been removed by that extra secret process described by the phrase 'It's Toasted'."

WHEN THESE STATEMENTS were first made, we assumed that they were a casual phase of that manufacturer's advertising and did not represent a deliberate and calculated policy. After making a few such statements, he abandoned this particular form of advertising. However, other statements used in his advertising came to the attention of the Federal Trade Commission on a question of their truthfulness.

As a result of the action of the Federal Trade Commission he was ordered to stop his admitted practice of using in his advertising false testimonials of non-smokers to the effect that they kept slender by smoking his brand of cigarettes, and was further ordered to stop using other fake testimonials and the specious argument that all can keep slender by smoking that brand of cigarettes. He then began to use again the form of statement quoted above or variations of it.

IF ANY MANUFACTURER chooses to say that the tobaccos he uses contain "harmful irritants, corrosive acids, that are injurious to the throat," and then to claim that these things are removed by the heat-treating process, that is his own affair. But when he tries to create the impression that it is general practice to use in cigarettes such rank tobaccos as he describes, we object to the attempted reflection on the industry.

We have never used in our blend those rank tobaccos which can be properly described as containing "harmful irritants, corrosive acids," nor do we believe that they are used by some of the other manufacturers.

If that manufacturer wishes to advertise heat treatment, calling it toasting or what-not, that is his right. But when, in so doing, he tries to create the impression that he is the only maker of cigarettes who treats tobaccos with heat, the truth again needs to be told.

The publication of a fake testimonial is no greater perversion of the truth than to imply that the heat treatment of tobaccos is an exclusive process with any single manufacturer.

THE FACT is that the use of heat treatment in the manufacture of tobacco is about the most commonplace and universally practiced method in the industry. It has long been standard practice.

We use heat treatment in its most modern and scientific application, both in the preparation and in the manufacture of those mild, fragrant, ripe tobaccos that carry their natural goodness into CAMELS.

The first CAMEL Cigarette we ever made was manufactured under the heat-treating process. Every one of the billions of CAMELS produced since has been manufactured under heat treatment. We rely upon heat to the limits of its possibilities to make our good tobaccos better. It cannot make inferior tobaccos good.

WHETHER OR NOT a manufacturer, to have something to talk to the public about, attaches a contrivance to his heat-treating machines to catch, condense and bottle the vapors that come from them can have no more effect toward improving the tobacco than your catching and bottling the vapors that come from your teapot would have toward improving the tea in the pot.

Our own brand, CAMEL, continues to grow, but we are, nevertheless, unwilling to let these far-reaching false statements or impressions regarding the cigarette industry go uncorrected.

Savings Passbooks Sought by Crooks

Use Them to Steal Money by Forged Slips—Should Be Guarded as Carefully as Cash.

CONTINUAL vigilance in safeguarding savings pass books, as well as blank and cancelled checks, against theft by crooks, who use this material in forgery operations, is urged on bank customers by James E. Baum, Deputy Manager of the American Bankers Association, in charge of its Protective Department. This department is continually vigilant in promoting means, both among bankers and the general public, to thwart the operation of bank crooks. It annually investigates hundreds of crimes against banks and is responsible for the majority of arrests among this class of criminals.

"In a large majority of cases of forgeries on checks or savings withdrawal orders investigated by the American Bankers Association, stolen blank checks or savings pass books were the forgers' chief stock in trade," Mr. Baum says. "In many instances the temptation presented through the careless handling by depositors of cancelled or blank checks or pass books so that they fell into the hands of others was the immediate stimulus for hitherto honest people to commit their first criminal offense."

Banks should educate their deposit-

tors to exert the same degree of care in handling these instruments and to avoid leaving them about unguarded as they exercise in respect to actual money because they represent money, he declares.

For dealing with the bank robbery situation, Mr. Baum recommends the use of electrical alarms actuated by any tampering with the wires or mechanism and also wider adoption of the plan of state police forces now employed in a few states, declaring that last year in seven eastern states where state police forces were maintained there were only 20 bank hold-ups as against 164 similar attacks perpetrated against banks in five states in the central and far west, where banks are denied the advantages of the speedy and coordinated action given by statewide police forces.

"The records of the American Bankers Association Protective Department reveal that for many years the odds in favor of state police protection have been at least 8 to 1 when measured by the experience of banks in states where efficient police protection is missing in the rural districts," he says.

The Thinker Leads Modern Progress

By JOHN G. LONSDALE
President American Bankers Association

THE greatest need of the world today is interpreters of our times—modern Daniels in agriculture, finance, politics, industry—who can see through the fog and haze that enshroud our difficult problems and advise, instruct, and influence those who are either indifferent or limited in their perceptions.

John G. Lonsdale

Through the thinker and the interpreter, unknown situations are disclosed or puzzling conditions explained in logical light. The American people are so constituted that they can meet and combat any situation once it is known and understood. It is the unknown that comes like the thief in the night and brings disaster.

Some one has defined prosperity as something the business men create for the politicians to take credit for. But America's present-day prosperity can be defined as a product resulting from the business man's ability to study and to interpret. Huge corporations maintain research staffs and special bureaus to interpret the times for them. Disaster looms in the offing for any industry that goes blithely on its way day after day without due regard to significant trends in trade and business.

Keeping Up With Change

Leaders of finance have discovered that they cannot remain passive in an age when all the rest of the world is in a transitional stage. The modern banker not only must know about the changing styles in other lines of business but above all must be alert to the transformations which are taking place in his own. He must be a man of keener, broader vision, because the order of the day is for larger units of service. Mergers and consolidations have taken place in great numbers. We now talk of billions where a few years ago we talked of millions.

We have only begun our changes. What disposition is to be made of the many problems that they bring will depend in large measure upon our leaders, upon the students and the interpreters who can read accurately the signs of the times, so that we may base future actions and hopes upon their wisdom. The quickest way to go to the top is to go to the bottom of things, and let us hope that among them will be found many who will not only aspire to leadership but will be successful in reaching their goal.

Extensive alterations and improvements are to be made to the store of Wallace & Flum, 241 Mill street, according to announcement made by the firm today.

The entire front of the store is to be torn out and a modern and attractive one installed in its place. There will be two large display windows, and the store room will be extended back to the rear. The additional room has been necessitated by the increase in business of the firm, and more ground space is to be occupied. The front of the store proper is to be lowered so that only one step will be necessary to enter from the sidewalk, where now there are three steps.

After the alterations and improvements have been completed to the building, the most modern and latest in store equipment, including the latest minute improvement in refrigeration, will be installed. When the entire building, along with its equipment, has been completed, it is believed that the Wallace & Flum establishment will be the finest in this section.

DRUNKENNESS IN PARIS

Arrests for drunkenness are three times as great in Paris per 10,000 of population as in New York, the wettest of American cities. In Paris the arrests for drunkenness are 50 per 10,000, while in New York they are 15 per 10,000. In Paris the police are inclined to leniency in making such arrests, whereas in New York they are inclined to arrest anyone seen drunk. In London the convictions for drunkenness, not arrests, have ranged from 48 to 50 per 10,000 in the past eight years. In Edinburgh the arrests for drunkenness are startling. They have recently gone as high as 153 per 10,000, while the highest mark in New York's arrests for drunkenness since Prohibition has been a fraction more than 18 per 10,000 in 1924. These figures deserve the study of those who think that there is less drunkenness in Europe than in the United States.—The Baptist.—(Adv.)

KONJOLA BRINGS NEW HEALTH TO THIS YOUNG LADY

Severe Attack of Nervousness Soon Yields to Power of New Medicine

MISS DOROTHY M. CHEW

"I suffered from a nervous ailment for a long time," said Miss Dorothy M. Chew, Wilmer, near Lancaster. "My blood appeared to be in very bad condition, and skin eruptions were a source of annoyance and worry. I became irritable and indifferent to my work and my friends. My appetite was poor and my weight was going down alarmingly. I tried many medicines but nothing helped me in the least."

"Finally my grandmother, who had taken Konjola and had been helped wonderfully, prevailed upon me to take this new medicine. After the first bottle, I seemed to sense a change in my condition. I kept up the treatment and my nerves began to grow steady and strong. I slept well at night and my appetite so improved that I ate heartily and enjoyed each meal. I took on weight and became stronger and more energetic each day. My skin has cleared up and I am in excellent health."

BAN JOHNSON WOULD SPANK 'THE GREAT' SHIRES

By Ban Johnson
SAN DIEGO, Cal., Mar. 19.—Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics will win the 1930 world series with comparative ease.

Connie could have won the pennant in 1928 and again in 1929, if he had not taken on Tris Speaker and "Ty" Cobb. Mack has an excellent group of ball players now, and has them organized into a splendid club.

I predict that the Athletics will experience no difficulty in winning the league title this year.

Among Mack's promising players is Mickey Cochrane, one of the greatest catchers major league baseball has ever seen. In all departments of the game, the Athletics are outstanding and there is no reason why they should not walk away with the season.

Art Shires, the Chicago fistic wonder, should be taken out and spanked. He talks too much. He is apparently not much better as a prize fighter than ball player.

I do not believe in mixing sports. I have known of ball players who became so engrossed in shooting kelly pool, another sport, that they lost their prestige on the diamond.

The Athletics are all ball players who concentrate on that game. And in Mack they have an inspiring leader who cannot be praised too much, even with awards as an outstanding citizen, such as he received from his home town of Philadelphia the other day.

WHITE SOX IS MUCH IMPROVED TEAM

By Harry Neilly
I. N. S. Sports Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Mar. 19.—Considerable improvement has been achieved by the White Sox since baseball blew the whistle last October. No championship aspirations are harbored by this outfit, but it is apparent to the most casual observer the alabaster hose are likely to play more interesting ball in 1930.

Two factors contribute to the rosy outlook. Donnie Bush has developed a new spirit on a team whose listlessness was a "mild scandal" and additional punch has been added.

Manager Bush, who quit Pittsburgh late last season, sums up the situation neatly as follows: "We aren't claiming anything. We are just getting ready to play the best baseball we know how. I have been in the game a long time and I never saw a crew of young men go to work as cheerfully as our squad has this spring. I don't know how many games we will win, but we will battle in all of them."

The Sox went out last autumn to acquire some minor leaguers capable of swinging a bat with vigor. In the preliminary games to date they have more than lived up to their advance notices.

Big Jim Moore, lately of Dallas, has assailed the choice offerings of the giant pitchers lustily. It is more than likely that he will alternate in left field with Watwood, a holdover, when the season begins. Smead Jolly, from California, was late in reporting, but he batted nearly 400 in the coast league last season and is scheduled to be the regular right fielder. Carl Reynolds, who led the Sox with an average of .317 last year, has been transferred to center field, where he will remain. Reynolds is the fastest runner in the American League and is being schooled in going back on a fly.

Harris from Portland and Blackberry are lively young men, but it is not apparent at this writing how they can beat out the fielders heretofore mentioned.

On the infield, Chalmers Cissell, ($125,000 in cash and players) has been turned into a second baseman. He tumbled into the duties naturally and is much more proficient there than at short. He is a natural second baseman, whereas he had a tendency to fight certain balls at short.

Difficulties with the self-styled "Great" Shires leaves Bud Clancy the only first base candidate.

He is a good spring hitter. Shires is in very bad status with C. A. Comiskey because of certain pugilistic activities and talk in the public prints.

Of course, William Kamm, who was a holdout, is the regular third baseman.

There is a scramble for shortstop. Irving Jeffries, a young man from Dallas, Ernie Smith from Birmingham and Bill Hunnefeld are competing for the place. Smith and Jeffries hit about the same, a trifle over 300 in the minors. Hunnefeld has been somewhat of a washout for several seasons.

Jeffries and Cissell teamed well around second base, but Smith is an equally good fielder. Permanent employment no doubt will go to the fellow who hits best.

Moe Berg, Chick Autry and John Riddle constitute the catching staff. Autry is in better condition than ever, while Berg always goes along at a steady pace. Riddle is a good receiver with a strong arm.

The pitching staff is constructed around Ted Lyons, Al Thomas and "Uncle" Urban Eber.

Bob Weiland, a juvenile left hander, has mastered control. He had enough stuff naturally but was wild last year. Cecil Pat Caraway, Topeka, is another southpaw with almost uncanny control.

The pick of the young men is Victor Frisier. He was in 45 ball games for Dallas of the Texas League in 1929 and allowed only 2.61 earned runs per game.

Harold McKain, who finished the last campaign well, is certain to stick. Ed Walsh, Jr., is an improved young man just about ready to be a winning pitcher.

Lou Garland, a powerful man from Joplin, has speed but is a year or two away from fast circles. Grady Adkins is at an age where improvement is impossible but he should win more frequently supported by a team that has a chance of making runs.

The old war horse, Ted Blankenship, reported sixteen pounds lighter than he was last autumn. Maybe he can win now.

The Sox also have Dutch Henry, whose record with the Giants last year was five won and six lost.

The most impressive thing about the White Sox is the desire of the hired hands to accomplish something. It has not been necessary for either Manager Donnie Bush or Coach Barney Kelly to prod the athletes to greater endeavor. Lack of this spirit made the Sox a rather drab ball team in previous seasons.

Jim Crow, Moore said had informed him Lila approached him months ago and urged him to "go kill white witch." The prosecution will contend that failing to interest Crow, the Indian woman, with primitive guile, then persuaded Mrs. Bowen to do the killing, first telling her Mrs. Marchand through witchcraft had caused the death of Mrs. Bowen's husband.
